Text:

English Language

More than 360 million people in the world speak English as their first language. With 252 million people, the United States has the greatest number of English speakers. The United Kingdom comes second with a population of 57 million, Canada third with 26 million, Australia fourth with 17 million, Ireland fifth with 3.6 million, New Zealand sixth 3.4 million, Jamaica seventh with 2.3 million and Trinidad is in the eighth position with 1.7 million people. To all these English-speaking countries, English came on the boat of British colonizers. In each of its new homes, it developed and became a little different from British English.
