

Text

People eat different foods in different places in the world. Let's take an example: Nepal has no sea. Most of the people are farmers. They grow grains and other crops in low lands. They live chiefly on rice and corn, which grow in terraced fields. They raise goats and cattle for dairy produce. They eat meat only on special occasions. Hindus who make up 90 percent of the population don't eat beef. Muslims don't eat pork.
